

Women & Diaconal Ministry in the Orthodox Church: Past, Present & Future

Saturday, December 6, 2014 / 9 AM to 5 PM

Union Theological Seminary / 3041 Broadway @ 121st St., NY, 10027

THE PAST Build a solid understanding of the female diaconate in the early and medieval Church with presentations and discussion that explore the ministry and the attempts at the restoration of the office in the modern era through the work of Evangelos Theodorou, the decisions of the Rhodes Consultation, and the churches of Russia and Greece.

THE PRESENT Learn about the 'diaconal' work that women are doing today as chaplains, spiritual directors, ministers of the Word, and parish administrators and outreach coordinators.

THE FUTURE Explore why an ordained ministry is necessary, how a deaconess would/could serve today, and what short-term and long-term steps could be taken for restoration of the office as well as rejuvenation of the entire diaconate—male and female—for the building up of the Church today.
